Lake Harriet Walk - Points of Interest

5K #	10K #	Description
-	4	Queen Ave has some of the oldest and most historic houses in Linden Hills, and is the only remaining residential street in Minneapolis with an operating streetcar track.
7	7	Lake Harriet was named after Harriet Leavenworth, wife of the US Army officer who in 1819 built what later became known as Fort Snelling at the confluence of the Minnesota and Mississippi Rivers, the first permanent white settlement in this area. The Dakota Indians called Lake Calhoun just to the north of here Mde Medoza ("Lake of the Loons") and their name for Lake Harriet was Mde Un-ma ("Other Lake"). Lake Calhoun is the largest lake in Minneapolis, and Lake Harriet is the second largest with a surface area of 335 acres. It has an average depth of 29' (maximum depth 82'), and is stocked with walleye, muskellunge, largemouth bass, and pan fish.
-	10	2620 W 44th St was the home of staunch feminist author and journalist Brenda Ueland, who was among the Jazz Age literati of the Roaring '20s. Her bestselling book was "If You Want to Write," which Carl Sandberg called "the best book ever written on how to write." This house was often a subject of her writing. She once described a romantic fantasy of spying whales on Lake Harriet from her many-windowed room on the second floor. Brenda married three times, had numerous lovers in between, regularly walked up to nine miles a day, and lived to the ripe old age of 93.
4	11	This street has an eclectic variety of housing. The grassy median is known as Dell Park, one of Minneapolis' smallest.
5	12	This was once the site of a wooden toboggan run that was constructed each winter down the hillside onto the frozen lake. Look behind you up the hill and imagine what a thrill that ride must have been! W 45th St above this point was blocked off in 1940 due to its treacherous winter driving hazards.
6	14	After 500 meters from here, you may notice a tiny door at the base of a tree on the right side of the trail (near a "Wrong Way" sign on the bike trail). This is the home of Mr Little Guy, a leprechaun who has lived by Lake Harriet for many years. Children leave questions for him on tiny pieces of adding machine paper and then return the following week to magically find Mr Little Guy's personal reply!
8	16	This garden was established in 1908 by Minneapolis Park Superintendent Theodore Wirth with the planting of 250 varieties of roses, giving Minneapolis the second municipal rose garden in the country (Wirth had also designed the first such rose garden, in Hartford CT). His son Conrad Wirth supervised the design of the White House Rose Garden during the Kennedy Administration many years later. {Strolling Over the Rainbow}
-	18	The Peace Bridge contains stones from a bridge in Hiroshima that was destroyed by the atomic bomb in 1945, and a memorial "peace stone" from Nagasaki, sister city to St Paul.
-	19	During the early-mid 1800s, this land comprised an agricultural Dakota Indian village called Reyata Otanwa. It was later acquired by William King and became part of Lyndale Farm, which he named after his father Rev Lyndon King. Parts of Lyndale Farm later became Lakewood Cemetery (1870s), the Roberts Bird Sanctuary and Lyndale Park (1890).
-	21	The name of this garden has nothing to do with the judicial system. Rather it is an area used for testing the hardiness and disease resistance of perennial plants for the Minneapolis Parks Department.
9	23	While Lake Harriet is still one of the most visited recreation areas in the Twin Cities, its popularity today pales in comparison to what it was 100 years ago. A good example of this is the size of the current 1986 band shell, which is the fifth and one of the smallest in a long line of entertainment pavilions that have stood here since 1888. Stop for a moment and enjoy the ambiance of The Lake as so many others have done for the past 125 years.
11	26	The Tudor Revival-style mansion at 4236 Queen Ave was the home of 1930s US Senator Thomas Schall and once included a greenhouse, tennis court and stables. The Craftsman bungalow at 4290 Queen Ave with its wide over-hanging eaves, large gable ends, and low open porch make the structure seem almost one with the earth. At this point you can also see the 1905 Queen Ave bridge over the old streetcar line.
-	27	The intersection with W 42nd St was the boarding site for another toboggan run down to the lake. 4051 Linden Hills Blvd at one time had its own apple orchard and was originally the site of one of the first structures in Linden Hills, the Bellevue Club resort hotel and Lurline Boat Club.
-	28	Notice the two uniquely joined cottages at 2617 W 40 th St, classic examples of their architectural style, as is the bungalow at 2627 W 40 th St.
