On this walk, you will walk through tree-lined residential streets in Kensington's Victorian-era historic area and past the Noyes Library for Young Children district, Warner Mansion & Warner Circle Park, Antique Row and onto the Rock Creek Park Trail.

Brainard Warner and Crosby Noyes, editor of The Washington Star, built Noyes Library (1893) — the oldest library in Montgomery County.

Warner purchased property south of Knowles Train Station in 1890. His property became known as a "garden suburb" which he designed after Kensington, England. During the town's incorporation (1894), the state named the new town, post office and train station "Kensington."
