Woodbury has a strong commitment to addressing the challenges facing pollinators through both City resources and the non-profit community. This event was developed to demonstrate and reinforce this commitment both within Woodbury as well as the broader region and to provide resources and how they can help in this effort. Woodbury has engaged its citizens and multiple foundations and organization to develop a pollinator corridor. This communal space will provide educational principles on pollinators and produce harvestable seed source for the City of Woodbury. The Minnesota Board of Soil and Water Resources has a pollinator toolbox with information on residential pollinator habitats:

<https://bwsr.state.mn.us/residential-pollinator-habitat>

Features along the trail include:

- Efforts underway at the Woodbury YMCA and the nearby grounds to feature pollinator-friendly plants. One area is being used by local schools as a teaching workshop.
- Nearby pollinator-friendly and environmentally-significant features identified in the Marsh Creek Park Savanna Oaks Natural Area Nature Trail Guide.
- The pollinator-friendly plant nursery established by the City in partnership with Great River Greening along a walking trail south of Lake Road and Ojibway Park.
- Ojibway Park.

Partners include:

Twin Cities Volkssports, The City of Woodbury, Woodbury Thrives, the Woodbury Community Foundation, the Woodbury YMCA, Local Master Gardeners, Master Water Stewards, Master Naturalists, Great River Greening, Friends of the Fen, District 833 South Washington County Schools, Washington County Public Health and Environment, Metro Blooms (Metroblooms.org) and AQBlue Thumb (bluethumb.org),

Blue Thumb—Planting for Clean Water® is a public/private partnership promoting native plants, raingardens, shoreline stabilization projects and turf alternatives to reduce runoff and improve water quality. Partners include local governmental units (watershed districts, conservation districts, cities and counties), non-profit organizations, and private companies such as nurseries and landscape design and build companies, all working toward Blue Thumb goals. Blue Thumb is coordinated by Metro Blooms.
